★ Extreme Heat & Community Resilience Program by ICARP - extreme heat events in California are causing significant health, climate resilience, and social equity challenges. Vulnerable populations, such as the elderly, children, and those with pre-existing health conditions, face heightened risks of heat-related illnesses. The program will support local, regional, and tribal initiatives aimed at mitigating the impacts of extreme heat. Kings Partnership is actively seeking community partner organizations interested in collaborating with this initiative. As a prominent community outreach organization, the Kings Partnership aims to lay the groundwork for community education, awareness, and outreach regarding extreme heat and climate resilience. If your organization is interested in participating in any capacity, please reach out to Karina at karina@kfpf.org or Gaby at gabriela@kfpf.org. Opportunities for collaboration also extend to potential co-applicants within the grant framework
